LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 30, 1868.

PROCEEDINGS IN IMPEACHMENT.

Last Tuesday morning the House met at 11 o'clock, an hour earlier than usual, to consider the replication by the Managers to the President's answer. The galleries were filled with spectators, who were determined to get a glimpse of one of the scenes in the great trial, but had not been able to get tickets of admission to the Senate chamber. I heard of an individual who offered to pay $20 for a ticket, but could not get one for love or money, although he had traveled 1,000 miles to witness the trial. A few minutes after 11 o'clock Mr Boutwell presented the replication which, in substance, denies all the averments in the President's answer, and affirms that the said Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, is guilty of the high crimes and misdemeanors mentioned in the said articles, and that the House of Representatives is ready for the same." After a debate of an hour and a half, most of the time occupied by the Democrats, the House adopted the replication by a vote of 116 ayes to 36 noes. The House then resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, and accompanied the Managers to the Senate chamber.

At 1 o'clock the Senate suspended legislative business, and Chief Justice Chase assumed the chair. A few minutes later, the Managers, followed by members of the House, entered the Senate chamber. After the reading of the proceedings of the previous day, Mr Boutwell rose and presented the replication, a copy of which, on motion of Senator Johnson, was furnished to the counsel for the defense. The Chief Justice then announced that the next business in order was the pending motion of Senator Johnson to allow the President ten days longer in which to prepare for trial. After a few remarks, participated in by several Senators, Senator Edmunds moved that the Senate retire to the conference chamber for consultation. The motion was carried—29 to 24—and, at half past 1 o'clock, the Senate retired. After a consultation of two hours the Senate returned to the chamber at half past three, and the Chief Justice stated that the Senate had adopted an order providing for the commencement of the trial on Monday, the 30th, to day. The court then adjourned and the Senate held a short Executive session.

THE TRIAL COMMENCED—BUTLER'S GREAT SPEECH.

The usual routine of legislative business occupied the attention of both houses of Congress in the interval between Tuesday and Monday. To day the Senate was again the chief center of interest All who could by any possible means obtain tickets were there. The pressure for tickets was as great as ever, and hundreds applied for tickets only to be disappointed, as on each former occasion. Before the session commenced the Senate galleries were crowded with an audience eager to hear the opening of the trial. As on each former day, two thirds or three fourths of the audience were ladies, nearly all attired in the most brilliant and costly costumes. At 12 o'clock Mr Wade rapped the Senate to order. Legislative business was continued till half past 12, when Mr. Wade vacated the chair, and the Chief Justice called the Impeachment Court to order. In a few minutes the Managers—Bingham, Boutwell, Butler, Logan, Stevens, Wilson and Williams—entered the Chamber and took seats at the table on the left of the Vice President's desk. The President's counsel—Stanbery, Evarts, Nelson, Curtis and Groesbeck—were seated at the table on the right. Mr. S. S. Washburne, Chairman of the House Committee of the Whole, occupied a seat in the center aisle, in front of the presiding officer. On his left sat Gen Schenck, grim and sedate, and Speaker Colfax, cheerful and smiling as he always is, and on the right Mel'therson, Clerk of the House. The members of the House occupied chairs and sofas ranged round the center circle of the Senators' desks. Ten minutes before 1 o'clock, Gen. Butler rose and opened the case for the prosecution, in a speech of great power. It was printed in pamphlet form, and the reading of it occupied nearly three hours. It was a masterly argument—probably the greatest speech of his life. It goes back in the history of impeachment cases some five hundred years. Butler is not an orator, his voice being harsh and unpleasant, but the great research and power displayed in the argument, commanded the profoundest attention of all in the Senate Chamber and in the galleries, from the beginning to its close. After he had read about two hours, a recess of ten minutes was taken. He then resumed, and closed a little before four o'clock. Bingham made a few remarks which were inaudible in the gallery, after which Wilson rose and read a part of the evidence. The Court then adjourned to 4 o'clock, and a few minutes after the Senate adjourned. The trial will be resumed to morrow. The President's counsel will try to stave it off if possible, and will ask for a further extension of time, knowing very well that Johnson will go out of the White House whenever the Senate comes to a vote They will probably ask for time to bring Rousseau from Alaska, but the Senate will not be likely to allow any more unnecessary delay.

A DRUNKEN SENATOR.

Saulsbury was drunk to day, as usual. He staggered out of the Senate Chamber, and asked a policeman who was stationed at one of the doors if he intended to take him to the station house. On being answered in the negative, he went to another policeman and offered $500 if he would go in and take "old Ben Butler by the nap of the neck and drag him out of the Senate!" He lost his hat during the day, and when he wanted to go home, he went down to the headquarters of the Capitol Police bareheaded. One of the policemen gave him an old cap, which he put on, and then went staggering off down toward Pennsylvania avenue in company with one of the door keepers

JOHNSON'S PET IN WASHINGTON.

An order has just been issued from Gen Grant's headquarters, by direction of the President, relieving General Hancock from the command of the 5th Military District, and assigning him to the Military Division of the Atlantic, lately created by Johnson, with his headquarters in this city. Gen. Hancock returned to Washington this morning from Connecticut, and will take command to morrow Brevet General R. C. Buchanan has been assigned to the command of the 5th Military District

LECTURING IN THE CAPITAL CITY.

Washington is well supplied with public lectures and amusements at present Rev. E. H. Chapin of New York, (Universalist) one of the first pulpit orators in America, lectures before the Young Men's Christian Association to night Miss Anna Dickinson lectures in Wall's Opera House, Maggie Mitchell commences an engagement in the National Theater, and Dan Rice's Circus opens up.

THE VICE PRESIDENCY.

Next to the impeachment trial, which will soon terminate by the removal of Andrew Johnson from office, the subject of the Vice Presidency seems to attract most attention. The nomination of General Grant for President, on the Republican ticket is a foregone conclusion; but the candidates for Vice Presidents are very numerous, and there will, no doubt, be a sharp contest in the convention among the friends of the various aspirants. Massachusetts has instructed her delegates to vote for Grant for President and Senator Wilson for Vice President, New York has instructed for Grant and Fenton, Pennsylvania for Grant and Curtin, Maryland for Grant and Creswell; Ohio for Grant and Wade, Kentucky for Grant and Speed, Indiana for Grant and Colfax, Michigan for Grant and Colfax; Missouri for Grant and Wade, and several other States have instructed for Grant without naming a candidate for their Vice President. The chances are strongly in favor of Wade or Colfax, and if we can get a man from the Pacific coast, it is quite certain that either Speaker Colfax or brave, honest "Old Ben Wade," who will take Logan's place in a few weeks, will be the next Vice President.

PERSONAL MENTION.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Senator Williams assembled at their rooms in the National Hotel, last Saturday evening, where they were received and entertained in a very hospitable manner by the Senator and his accomplished lady Refreshments were furnished, and everything passed off agreeably and to the satisfaction of all who had the pleasure of being present Among the visitors, I noticed Senator Corbett and lady, Mrs. Stratton, Messrs B. F. Dowell, B. J. Pengra, H. Cummins, L. S. Thompson, J. Ross Browne, Judge Olney and Lander, and a number of others from the Pacific coast Senators Morton, Ramsey, Van Winkle, Chief Justice Chase and two or three Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Col. Ordway, Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives, Mrs Gen Grattes of Louisiana, Mrs Stephens, the well known authoress, and many other distinguished persons

QUARREL BETWEEN A. JOHNSON AND JERRY BLACK.

Some surprise was manifested last Monday when it was observed that Jerry Black, one of the President's counsel, did not make his appearance with the other attorneys in the Senate Chamber. It has since leaked out that he and Mr Johnson had a violent quarrel, whereupon Judge Black withdrew, and refuses to have anything to do with the trial. The President insisted upon having something in the answer which the lawyer objected to, and finally the dispute terminated in a fierce quarrel Black left the White House in disgust; and instead of defending his late friend and chief, he denounces Andy as an "old fool!" There is the best authority, also, for saying that the President had an angry dispute with Mr Evarts on the same subject but the latter will continue in the cause If Johnson had not been ignorant of law, and as stubborn as a jackass, he would have kept out of trouble Ignorance and stubbornness have led to his ruin. No wonder the attorneys cannot satisfy such a man. His conviction and removal from office which he has so long disgraced is inevitable As his time draws to a close, the Copperheads turn from him with disgust, leaving him soured at all mankind, and a living evidence of the truth of his declaration that "treason must be made odious, and traitors must take a back seat"

The County Convention

The people of this county are already fully informed of the action of the Union Convention on Saturday last. The ticket is before them, and doubtless the action of the Convention has ere this been pretty thoroughly considered and discussed. So far as we have been able to learn, the ticket is received, as a whole, with very general satisfaction. It may, we think, be said with perfect correctness that fewer objections are made against it than are very commonly heard on like occasions. It is natural that there should be some disappointments, but no true Union man allows any feeling of this description to interfere with his duty to his party and the principles it maintains. Our first work on occasions like this is to close up our own ranks, and this we believe is already substantially effected. The ticket is one which will command the vote of the party, and if we bring out our full strength and work as earnestly as we ought, victory is won.

At this crisis we are not contending for a paltry county triumph. Interests of far greater magnitude are involved. The Presidential election is almost upon us. It is barely six months until that great contest will be decided. That decision so far as this State is concerned, is extremely likely to be affected in no small degree by the result of the election which will be held in June. Hence the importance of polling our full strength in the approaching State election. Therefore, the whole questions at issue before the people unite to a great extent into these elections which are held immediately before the great struggle for the Presidency. The part which Oregon will play in the next Congress is also to be settled now and these considerations ought to urge every member of the Union party, every man who has been true to the country during the great struggle, to do his whole duty at this time. The final success of all we have been contending for during the seven years' struggle depends to some extent, and perhaps depends more than we know, upon the firmness and energy of Union men at this particular juncture. The contest takes such a shape that it virtually involves all the issues which the people of Oregon will be called, in the great battle of November, to decide upon.

We present the ticket made by the Union Convention on Saturday, to the voters of this county in full confidence that it will be triumphantly elected. As to merit, it may safely challenge comparison with any ticket which our opponents can make. From this time the campaign here will go on in earnest, and in June the Union party will again erect the standard of victory in Multnomah.

One Robert McDougall publishes a card in a city paper, in which he states that the use of his name as appended to a notice which appeared in the OREGONIAN of Saturday, headed "Irishmen, Attention!" was "wholly unauthorized by him. We have in our possession the original notice, as handed into this office for publication, annexed to which is the name of "Robert McDougall," in his own handwriting. After Mr. McDougall published his denial on Saturday, some of the Irishmen of the city who had interested themselves in obtaining signatures to the notice (which was a call for a meeting of "Irish American citizens of Union principles") took the original paper to him and showed him his name which he was obliged to admit was written with his own hand. We make this statement of facts for their justification, as well as our own.

The Herald continues to assert that there is "no substantial difference" between Pendleton and Seymour on the greenback question. It is amusing to see that paper trying to stretch Democratic principles to unite these antipodes. There has been nothing like it since the time when certain hard headed Democrats used to assert that there was no difference between Douglas and Buchanan. But in that case we put Brick Pomeroy as an authority against the Herald. He assails Seymour as opposing the policy of Pendleton declaring that he "comes out square for paying the bonds in full and in gold." Also that "if Pendleton's plan means that, then he is a great humbug, and he and his friends are working up a popularity for him on false pretences." "Brick" is an authority against whom the Herald will not venture to appeal.

We all remember how a few years ago Andrew Johnson of Tennessee used the following language in reply to Joseph Lane, of Oregon, who had asked him what he would do were he the President of the United States. "The distinguished Senator asks me what I would do with the rebels were I President of the United States? I would have them arrested, I would have them tried, and, if found guilty, by the Eternal God, I would have them executed!" Andrew Johnson is now in the fourth year of his term as President of the United States and the country knows whether any rebels have been arrested, tried and executed by his order. He has sunk to a lower depth of infamy than ever was reached by the Senator to whom he was replying. Lane's treason was nothing to his.

S B Axtell, Democratic Congressman from California, in a late speech, spoke in this style of those in his party whose political creed is founded on the one idea of hatred of the negro:

As to those antediluvians who expect success or seek ephemeral fame by building a party on the defects or deformities of any of God's creatures, let them also stand as monuments of the good temper and patience of the people, who are willing to tolerate with a compassionate smile the weakness of a man who dares to reason that because the negro is inferior he should therefore be oppressed. The brave, the strong, the honest will tolerate this driveling from the same noble principle that dictates their action towards the negro—compassing to the weak.

It is almost incredible that a Democratic Congressman should talk so sensibly as this. No wonder that the "chivalry" are down on Axtell and their organs reading him out of the party.

Congressman Axtell of San Francisco has turned traitor to the Democratic party, so we learn from the two straight out organs, the Examiner and Despatch. Axtell lately delivered a speech in Congress in which he expressed some humane sentiments in regard to the negro, and the Democratic organs of San Francisco cry out, "away with him persecute him." There is a little fight in that city between the secesh and the more moderate wing of the party over the proposition to re-nominate him.

When, in 1860, the Democratic party threatened war in case the Republicans should exercise their right to elect a President, the people thought it well to vindicate this right of election and gave an overwhelming majority in the free States for Abraham Lincoln. And now when violence is threatened by a political party, if the tribunal which the Constitution created to try cases of impeachment shall hold trial and pronounce judgment under all its solemn responsibilities, it be comes necessary to hold that trial act from once that judgment, in order to maintain the integrity of the Constitution.

THE DEMOCRACY AND THE CHINESE.—A California paper says: The Democracy have been making a great ado about Chinese, but their practice is not consistent with their preaching. A banquet is to be given to the Chinese Ambassador at San Francisco, and Governor Haight is to preside while Casserly will make a speech. Is it possible that a Democratic Governor and Senator will eat at the same table with the "almond eyed" upon an equality, thereby "Mongolizing" as Governor Haight used to designate them in his stump speeches during the campaign?"

Albert Pike, late a Brigadier General in the Confederate army and a Commissioner for the rebel government for the Indian tribes west of Arkansas,—the same rebel was responsible for the bloody atrocities at Pea Ridge,—was in Washington recently for a week, and of course was closeted most of the time with the individual who was going "to make treason odious and punish traitors."

Franklin Pierce, ex President, has been taking an active interest in politics lately, as we learn from Eastern papers, and his activity naturally recalls his cheerful letter to Jefferson Davis in January, 1861, in which he wrote: "The fighting will not be along Mason and Dixon's line merely, it will be within our own borders, and on our own streets."

COMPLIMENTS TO ADOPTED CITIZENS.—The Butte County Press, a Copperhead paper published at Chico, in a late article on the war, tells the Union men: "You succeeded against the people of the South through the agency of hired assassins, and those assassins were Negroes, Hessian Germans, and Orange Irishmen."

Negro supremacy, though an imaginary danger, and supremely ridiculous, greatly troubles the Copperheads hereaway. Rebel supremacy would suit them much better. The party which tried to prevent the raising of flags in 1861 have not changed their faith and probably never will.

Col Chapman of Portland made a speech last Monday at Eugene City on the subject of Railroads, which a correspondent informs us was highly satisfactory to the people of that part of the State. He spoke in behalf of both the valley railroads.

The Copperheads denounce "Radicalism," so called, but never denounce rebels. Not one "Democratic" paper has ever said a word in condemnation of Southern treason.

Ben. Wade.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, in a long, pleasant letter about Senator Wade, closes as follows:

"I ought not to close these fragmentary jottings of things Mr. Wade said in the course of an evening's talk without adding—for the comfort of very many good and very innocent people who have been misled by the loose inventions of our ever friendly newspapers—that in the course of a whole conversation there was not an oath Mr. Wade cannot, to be sure, be given a certificate for entire freedom from the use of evangelical terms, but it is unjust to speak of him as more profane than the great majority of Congressmen, or to describe him as a man affecting tremendous oaths of peculiar and unique blasphemy. A more absurd idea has also been somewhat prevalent. Respectable newspapers have spoken of him as a drunkard. Remembering that Irwin McDowell, who never drank anything even as strong as coffee, was currently believed to have been drunk through the whole period of his active service, Mr. Wade has done well to never notice such slanders. I know, however, that many good people will thank me for a statement which I can make with entire good faith. I have known Mr. Wade for a long time, and have often seen him present on social occasions, when other Senators were intoxicated, I never knew him to be so; never heard of his being so; never saw his natural, hearty manner in any appreciable degree affected, and have rarely seen him join in the drinking. Whatever the country, alarmed at his radicalism, may apprehend from the prospect of Mr. Wade's becoming President, it may at least dismiss the fear that we shall be again disgraced by a sot at the White House. Wade's early educational advantages were those of the pioneers. On these he has steadily built, through a long life of intellectual activity. There are few better read men in most walks of English literature in the Senate. Probably there are not three better historians. To this day, he leaves the skimming of his immense newspaper mail to his wife, and one climbing the two flights of stairs that lead from the floor of the Washington House to the parlor is very likely to find the good, matronly woman by his side, interrupting him from time to time to read some extract from the papers of the evening, that concerns him to know. It is a pleasant domestic picture, and the American people will not be sorry to learn that it is from such a scene that their next President is to come."

The Mining Regions

[From the Philadelphia North American.]

Of all our mining regions, California seems to have been transcendently the most prolific, having yielded nine hundred millions of dollars' worth out of the aggregate above mentioned. Nevertheless, this great region seems to be coming down, the yield for 1859 being estimated at twenty five millions, which is about half the original product. The estimate of Nevada for 1868 comes nearly up to this, being twenty millions, Montana standing third in the array, with her twelve millions.

Down to the beginning of the present year, Montana appears to have yielded sixty five millions, and Idaho forty five millions, while the yield of Colorado has been but twenty five millions. We were quite prepared to hear that the population actually engaged in mining has greatly diminished, and does not now exceed fifty thousand, for the rewards of mining have been inadequate to the labor and suffering of the miners. The result is that placer or surface mining is on the decline, and that the working of veins of gold with the aid of machinery, is making rapid progress in all the gold regions, and although the bullion product is generally falling off, it will ultimately recuperate.

But it would be erroneous to estimate the benefits of the gold fever by the profits of mining, when we see before us the evidences that it has built up such prosperous States as California, Nevada and Oregon, and such flourishing territories as Arizona, Colorado, Montana, Idaho and Washington. In all these regions agriculture manufacture and commerce now preponderate over the mining interest, and the thriving settlements, not in any way concerned in gold mining, bespeak a permanent progress of the most gratifying character. The attractions of gold mining have undoubtedly stimulated the colonization of that whole region, and advanced its progression in development to an extent that would have been impossible under any other influences. In California, in particular, the mining of quicksilver, coal, copper and other valuable minerals has been built up by the capital resulting from the profits of gold mining, and a large foreign and domestic commerce established likewise.

Religious Items.

The Oregon Presbytery, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, will meet at Abequa, Marion county, on Thursday preceding the second Sunday in May.

A camp meeting will be held near Oakland, Douglas county, to embrace the second Sunday in June.

The nineteenth anniversary of the Oregon State Bible Society will be held at the Congregational Church, in Portland, on the second Wednesday in May.

A correspondent of the Advocate writes from Umatilla that everything indicates a determination on the part of that enterprising community to lend every encouragement to the promotion of moral and religious education.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The Herald's Berlin special says it is rumored that France, Austria and Prussia, have agreed to reduce their armies by granting furloughs.

Of this balance there will remain to be raised by the present year's taxation £1,500,000. Gladstone's remarks were listened to with great attention. He said that he did not intend to enter into the question of Abyssinian war. He thought the cost of the Abyssinian war was not to be calculated. He considered the settlement of the affair as the expenditure. The Chancellor of the Exchequer defended the Budget from the criticisms of the opposition. He said the Committee of Ways and Means would meet on the subject May 4th, which was agreed to. Adjourned.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25.—Some time since a young woman named Margaret Haggerty, from Vallejo, died at the house of a physician in this city, under such circumstances as justified the Coroner in sending for the body to be returned from Vallejo, and holding an inquest on the case to day. Dr John W Fox was arrested on the Coroner's warrant, charging him with having caused her death by criminal means. He was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000.

The body of a drowned man was found this morning on the beach this side of Fort Point. It is supposed to be the body of Poole who drowned himself on the 12th inst. The face is nearly decomposed. The flags on the City Hall and in the Plaza were at half mast to day under the auspices of the California Pioneers. The members of the Board of Supervisors marched in a body to the Hall, and the funeral was attended by a large concourse of the friends and acquaintances of the deceased. The Board of Supervisors adopted resolutions of respect and condolence with the family of the deceased.

A fire last night destroyed a frame house, No 1150 Folsom street, owned by Mrs Ryland and occupied by J Sullivan, shoe maker, and by Mr. Casey as a saloon. A two story building adjoining was damaged considerably by the flames. Property insured in the Builders' Company.

The Board of Supervisors have elected John A Russell, Clerk, vice Bingham, deceased.

The correspondence between Garibaldi and the society in this city for raising subscriptions for the wounded followers of the Italian patriot is published. The following is Garibaldi's letter:

CAPRERA, Feb 24 1868.

My Dear Friends—Although your city of mirage by consent so far away it has [illegible] persons to me, and I thank you from my soul for your general offering in behalf of our wounded. And I hold the same to Miss Marsh the President of the Committee of ladies in Florence. We all can retake the way of the liberties of Rome and strong with the help of generous men of heart as you are, we'll put to rout away finally from our beautiful Country the foul spectre of mercenary which now soils it. I am with lifelong gratitude, yours,

G. GARIBALDI.

Hon. S B Axtell was serenaded by some of his friends and constituents at the Mechanic's Hotel last night. He made a few remarks on the political situation and the question of the impeachment of Andrew Johnson.

The Barlow Pass is only fifteen feet above the level of the river, and from that point to Salem or ... for that matter, to Eugene City, there is no acclivity ... greater than a dozen feet to the mile. Mr Burrage left ... Salem on Thursday, to survey the route up Mill Creek ... valley.

THE FIRST FRUITS.—The first fruits of the "breaking of ground" for the Oregon Central Railroad, east side, ... only to be strawberries and cream. The Oregon ... NEW STYLE BUSINESS COATS.—Barman Bros now busi- ... ness coats are the most elegant garments in Portland. ... Their new shaped pantaloons are worn by all fashionable men. The suits made in their merchant tailoring establishment are now leading the fashions in Portland.

FURNITURE.—We call the attention of those in want of furniture, to the advertisement of Burgess & Shindler. We have seen their warerooms and must say that we have never seen a finer selection of furniture. Messrs. B. & S. have a well established business, having their Eastern goods direct from the manufacturers. Parties purchasing in their line may rely upon humane dealing and low prices.

Bed Time.

Rosebud lay in her trundle bed,
With her small hands folded as to her Lord;
And dazed her innocent eyes on me,
While a thoughtful shadow came over their glee
"Mamma" she said "when I go to sleep
I pray the Father my soul to keep
As the sheep and lambs are kept far away
To the beautiful home where the angels stay
I gather red roses and lilies white
I sing with the angels through all the long night;
And I wake in the morning and find I'm a sheep,
But I'm sadder than ever I was when I'm asleep
And I can't remember like beautiful sons
The garlands of lilies, the wind of Lebanon"

Origin of the Prairies.

The Chicago Post of March 16th has the following

At the last meeting of the Chicago Academy of Natural Sciences, Colonel Foster submitted an elaborate paper on the Origin of the Prairies." A subject of great interest to the people of the West and one which has a practical bearing upon its future development We have caused a careful abstract of the paper to be made, and herein present some of the conclusions arrived at Colonel Foster remarked that, whenever we examine a continental mass we ordinarily find a well defined belt, along the shores, succeeded as we advance inland by grassy plains, graduating in the interior into impassable deserts Whenever we study the annual precipitation of rain over such a continental mass, we find that where the moisture is equable and abundant, we have the woodland belt where it is deficient or irregularly supplied the grassy plains; and where it is wholly withheld the arid desert. The varying supply of moisture then is sufficient to account for this diversity of vegetation, modified to some extent by the physical latitude above the sea, extremes of heat and cold, etc. Most of us having been born in the vicinity of the sea, were accustomed to look out upon a landscape where every hill was clothed with a forest, and every stream had its waterfall, and this the observer supposed was the primal condition of the earth's surface Transferred to a region where the surface stretched out into a grassy plain, or were thrown into gently rounded outlines, with the trees restricted to park like clumps, or to the banks of sluggish streams, his mind would be very considerably modified, but if he were to penetrate into the interior and behold plains equally extended, without an arborescent form, the surface covered with broad wastes of artemisia, or with cacti which we had seen cultivated as a hothouse plant, shooting up thirty and even sixty feet in hight, or with saline efflorescences which glittered like snow flakes in the sun, his views would be still further modified.

He then proceeded to comment on the theory put forth in the first volume of the Illinois Geological Report, which would explain the formation of the prairie by the formation and growth of a great swamp, which presupposes a moist, humid climate, and a level, swampy plain, conditions which did not exist where the prairies obtain their grandest development, nor seem they due to the chemical and mechanical composition of the soil, as had been mentioned by others, for the substratum varied all the way from drifting sands to the most retentive clays; and the very substances—salt, gypsum, etc.—which at one extreme indicated great aridity, at the other would become fertilising agents. The theory which would attribute their origin to the annual burnings of the plains by the aborigines was not worthy of a passing notice. He next proceeded to trace the different zones of vegetation in the United States

1. The densely wooded region, which, starting west of the Superior, bears southeast to the west shore of Michigan and is thence protracted into Texas. The range of forest as well as of individual types, north and south, was determined by the temperature, but in their western range by those of moisture. He dwelt upon the rapid advance of many species of plants as soon as the Missouri basin, and the introduction of other forms unknown on the Alleghanies, which found their full development as they approached the Rocky Mountains.

2. The zone of alternate wood and prairie, which stretched from the shores of Michigan to the shore of the Missouri basin in Iowa, lat 42 long. 93 degrees west, and thence was protracted to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The western boundary was very irregular, as all the principal streams were lined with trees to within 300 miles of the Rocky Mountains. In this connection more notice of the characteristic grasses of the prairie, and how far they assumed the places of trees.

3. Vast grazing plains, with timber restricted to the immediate banks of streams, such as occur west of the Rocky Mountains. The absence of moisture, with the change in the diurnal temperature, the very hot days and the chilly nights, the purity of the air, etc., were referred to as in marked contrast with the climate of the Atlantic slope, and although the fruits of the eastern and arctic realms—which here flourish, were described as the unerring fruit of the great change.

The fact of rainfall precipitation, as manifested in the forests, was then pointed out, and the remarkable fact given to the route west during the Spring and Summer months, by which the remote plains received nearly as much moisture during the growing season as the Atlantic slope, the effect of which was to render the cultivation of the cereals practicable much farther west than could be if half the rain were equitably distributed and to a portion of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains from the condition of an uninhabitable desert. In the Spring Chicago receives one rain than Cheyenne, at the base of the mountains.

He next proceeded to trace the source of this moisture, and while he doubted not that there was a great aerial current passing round the earth from west to east, the result perhaps of its diurnal motion, yet there must be a marked disturbance. The great winds coming from the Pacific laden with moisture as they struck the Sierra Nevada would be robbed of their moisture and pass over the country as dry winds. True, on this west slope the precipitation may reach sixty-three inches, while in the great basin it drops to three inches.

There is many reason to believe that the moisture which falls on the United States is derived from the Gulf of Mexico The Northeast trades blow almost constantly into the Caribbean sea, where they are deflected to the north and northwest as they pass into the Gulf, hence the prevailing winds along the Texas coast are inland from April to October, when the plains are most profusely watered; they are south and southeast at St. Louis, but before reaching Cincinnati, they become merged in the great west and southwest currents which there form the prevailing winds

Finally, that if we study the geographical distribution of plants, in connection with the prevailing winds, the varying precipitation of moisture, and the loss of temperature, we can solve a law which will account for all the phenomena of forest, prairie and desert

4. Vast arid tracts, where all forms of arbor escent vegetation disappear, and the surface is often strewn with saline efflorescences, such as the Colorado Desert and the Great Basin, bounded on the west by the Sierra Nevada, which gave to the Pacific slope still different types of vegetation, particularly the sequoia, or red wood, the most gigantic of vegetable forms.

He next proceeded to discuss the varying supplies of moisture. The rains which water the Atlantic shore where the wooded tract prevails are nearly equally distributed over the four seasons Those which water the Mississippi valley are on equally distributed, those of spring and summer being in excess, the difference beginning to manifest itself where the prairies begin and becoming more marked on the western shore where the region becomes inhabitable, while on the California coast they are periodic, and make a well defined wet and dry season.

The most profusely watered portion of the United States, he remarked, was in the vicinity of the Gulf, The Alleghanies, so far from condensing the vapors and causing increased precipitation, seemed to serve as an entering wedge to separate the vapor-bearing currents and cause a more copious precipitation on their slopes than on their crests The great lakes, too, instead of generating moisture to be administered over the adjacent regions, repelled it, so that it was dryer in their immediate basins than on the plateaux which surround them.

A Visit to the Mutual Life

To the Editor of the "Home Friend." As the Dividends of Life Insurance companies are just now becoming considerable attention, permit me, through the medium of your highly influential and widely circulated journal "to believe that is the correct thing to say) to obtain my own experience of that mutual security of property

I have been insured for many years in the "Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York S F Winston President," and have regularly paid my premium on my policy

Being recently in New York I thought it well to call at the office and look after my dividends more particularly, as I had spent more in my than I thought I could afford, and considered it more prudent to draw a little from the Company than go in debt in a strange place

Accordingly I called at the office of the Company, which is certainly a very imposing structure to the casual observer, but, as it was paid for by the tune of three quarters of a million by me and other policy holders' money, I examined it a little more minutely than an ordinary passer by In no word there it is a detestably bad specimen of the Broadway order of architecture, which may be described as an extraordinary combination of the styles prevalent in mantlepieces and fish comfectionery vaults.

Through a hole in a glass partition I asked a clerk if I could see the President This young gentleman without stopping in his work or even looking at me, sang out in a loud voice, "Mr Bond" Suddenly there appeared before me a genuine specimen of respectable exterior and polite address who requested to know my business. I told him I desired to see the President respecting the Dividends on my policy "Oh! you wish to see the Asst Actuary This desk sir, and Mr. Bond with a bland smile placed me before another hole in the glass partition The young gentleman at demanded my policy, which after a short time was returned with the various "dividends" endorsed thereon, amounting in all to something nearly $2,000. So far this was very gratifying and I expressed myself in a manner complimentary to the management of the Company. A little further conversation, however, rather "seasoned my admiration" This, it was explained was the "reversionary value," or amount payable at my death, the actual dividends amounted to about $650 Accommodating my feelings to this altered condition of my pecuniary status with a slight effort, I stated to the clerk that I wished to draw a portion of the amount. The young gentleman smiled in a manner that plainly told me he was perfectly aware that I was from the rural districts, while he explained that the only portion on which I could draw a portion of my dividend was that I should immediately pay it back again to the Company as a premium on my policy!

"But I paid my premium for the year about a month ago, and do not propose to pay the next till it is due"

"Well, when it is, you can send an order to the Company to pay it out of your dividend and a receipt will be forwarded to you"

"That's all very well, but I do not need to use my dividends in that way. I put down my premiums as a necessary part of my expenditure and propose to pay them regularly. At present I have, accidentally, need of a sum of money which you say is here to my credit and belongs to me It seems odd if I can't get it"

"I have no discretion in the matter, sir, the Company's rules prescribe the manner in which the dividends should be paid,"

"Well, this seems to be rather unreasonable? Can I see the President?"

"Mr Bond!" sang out this young gentleman, evidently relieved at getting rid of me.

Mr Bond was again "on hand," mechanically polite, with a mechanical smile displaying a set of teeth which I strongly suspect were also mechanical.

Again expressed my desire to see the President on the subject of my dividends.

Mr. Bond suggested that the Actuary had entire control in those matters and would doubtless in a few words set the matter right.

I accordingly saw the Actuary in a comfortably furnished room up an iron staircase. And I am bound to say the little man appeared supremely at ease in an arm chair before a grate fire, with his foot against the mantlepiece reading a newspaper His statements were substantially the same as his assistant's The rules of the Company proclaimed no discretion in the matter From him I learned the fact, however, that if I wanted money I could easily obtain from a friend or other person a loan on my policy of the value of which he would give a certificate, than which there was no better security. This appearing to me my only resource, I told him I did not desire to part, even temporarily, with my policy, but that if he would give me a separate policy for my dividends and a certificate of its value, I would endeavor to make it suit my present purpose This, he informed me, the rules of the Company prohibited him from doing. Further conversation developed the facts that the only acknowledgement I could obtain from the Company for the $550 of my share in its surplus or of the $2,000 insurance which they kindly paid (to themselves) for my benefit was its simple endorsement on the back of my policy, and that in case I could not pay the Premium on the original policy the additions to it created by separate and independent payments of my own money, were also liable to be forfeited. Matters appearing more "mixed" than ever, I again stated that I would like to see the President on the subject Having withdrawn and returned to the lower office, I again fell in with the inevitable Bond, to whom I again repeated my request. Mr Bond, whose mechanism of politeness ran as smooth as ever, as if it were fresh greased for every interview, conducted me up a short stair to a raised platform and introduced me to the Vice President, a good looking and inspid young man, who was amusing or refreshing himself by biting his nails Here I may remark that the chief duty of the unfortunate Bond seems to be to conduct persons to the President, but whose real duty was to strive how not to do it," and I am bound to say that in this capacity he must give exceeding satisfaction to his employers

The whole ground was gone over to the Vice President, but he failed to make me see the matter from his point of view. The rules of the Company were etc, etc.

I insisted on seeing the President which request he endeavored to avoid granting with many evasions, until I had almost imagined that he (the President) was of the renowned "Mr. Harris" family, and expected to be told every moment that there was "no such a person a livin'."

He finally opened a door at his side and at last I was in the august presence of F. S. Winston, President

Notwithstanding the unsatisfactory notice of my interviews with the other officials, I must say that they were at least uniformly polite in their manner. Not so, however, was Mr. Winston, who locked at me over his spectacles with an expression, more of insolent wonder that I should be there at all, than of inquiry as to my business, he said nothing but stared at me until I declared my business. He stated that "under our rules" no other disposition could be made of the Dividends than those described by the Actuary, and manifested an impatience, that was anything but agreeable that I should bother him with such trivial matters. Every suggestion on my part was met by the reply, that the "rules" of the Company forbid such and such an act I remarked that this form of reply had met me in all my interviews and though perhaps quite satisfactory to the officers, was not so to me For my future guidance I would like to know what the rules of the Company were and asked him if such were printed for the use of the policy holders "No, sir, we do not print our rules, they can always be learned on any point by inquiring at the office."

"You have stated Mr Winston, that dividends have never been paid except in the manner stated, I have heard that large dividends have been paid to you and other officers of the Company before any were declared to the policy holders, is this so?"

Really, sir, I cannot discuss this question with you, I have my duties to attend to, and you will oblige me by permitting me to do so."

But sir, I am a policy holder in this Mutual Company and I presume I have a right to ask questions as to its management and the disposition of its funds which I have contributed to"

"I have no time now, sir, to enter into such matters. Write a letter to the Company, asking what questions you please and if thought advisable you shall have a reply"

Mr. Winston's manner was getting more and more "nasty" and seeing no further use in prolonging the interview I left, feeling, I confess somewhat nettled at my reception and treatment by a young man whose bread and butter I help to supply and whose whole family, sons, sons in law, nephews, and connections find a "soft thing" in their connection with this Company. TURBINE WATER WHEEL!

OF WHICH THE ABOVE IS AN ILLUSTRATION has FOUR SETS OF BUCKETS AND USES THREE FOURTHS OF THE WATER TWICE.

The old high priced unexpatiated and unrivalled wheel has been thoroughly tested by striking trial made by Mr H Kelly, at his saw mill and the public can see what he says as to the capacity of the two wheels in the following testimonial over his own signature

MR H W SHIPLEY SIR In reply to your inquiry as to how I like your Pacific Turbine Wheel, I have to say that I have used one more than three Leffel wheels 40 inches I left them here Which I substituted your 15 inch wheel for the 40 inch Leffel wheel the 40 inch filled it so that the machinery like to stop using 72 feet of water per minute more than the 40 inch Leffel At an open cut I put a 15 inch Leffel wheel on that 40 inch Leffel to finished and then I put on a 9 inch Leffel but it gave no better power than yours while it used 53 cubic feet in my water, per minute After some months, I replaced your wheel as I am still using it with the most satisfactory results I have used it to cut cedar shingles For instance while running the circular saw in a log which I sawed 15 inches, I added the planer with a 3 inch knife cutting from one eighth to one fourth of an inch depth, without in the least slacking the speed After thorough tests of both wheels, I am satisfied that your wheel with gates one-eighth of an inch open gives as much power as the Leffel with gates one-third open At half gate your wheel gives double the power of the Leffel at half gate At full gate, the power of yours exceeds that of the Leffel by from ten to twelve per cent At quarter gate the Leffel holds no comparison with yours at quarter gate

N B Mr Shipley was not present at either of the trials of his wheel, he being sick at the first, and absent from the State, at the second trial H KELLY
